Hi Laura, thank you for taking me call. I cover public lands for the Salt Lake Tribune, Emma Penrod is my colleague who covers environment. The story I'm working on has to do with abandoned mines in Utah that could be posing risks similar to what we saw at Gold King. We are hoping to get a list of all mine sites where EPA is participating in clean-ups and investigating whether discharged water is degrading surface and groundwater quality. We know about Richard Flat, but are there others? We also want to know which clean-ups are affected by EPA's decision to suspend activities at such sites.

thanks!
